Dear Tony,

As you know, I began researching paint protection products shortly after insect droppings damaged the paint on our inventory. I wanted an easily applied product that was more than just a wax protection. Since you had just received the distribution rights to the paint sealant trusted by major airlines (think Concord) and yacht owners worldwide, I felt it would be worthwhile to look at AGlaze.

Prior to buying this dealership, as the former GM of Longo Toyota (the largest dealership in the world) and former SE Regional President for UnitedAuto I have looked at a multitude of aftermarket products. Most do not live up to the hype.

In November 2006, we began a preinstall program, immediately applying AGlaze to every vehicle we received from Nissan. We elected to price AGlaze at a very modest $189. The product has received nearly unanimous approval: the service and parts department love the profit they receive, the detailers love how easily it is applied (plus how easily the car cleans up with AGlaze), the sales people think the product is excellent, the customers love the deep shine and no wax benefits, and sales managers can track the increased gross profit since we began the program. And I like it for all these reasons.

Since inception we have applied AGlaze to over 2,700 vehicles and have only had one customer who had an issue- and although it looked like it possibly came from beneath the paint, you still took care of it. While we still have time on the five year, no wax promise, I believe the product is living up to and exceeding expectations at this time.

Sincerely,
